PREFACE.

IN this volume are published a number of Babylonian chronicles and other documents of a similar character, which are discussed in the series of introductory chapters forming the first volume of the work. The texts, which are here published for the first time, are preserved in the British Museum, and may be briefly enumerated. They consist of—

(1) A chronicle concerning Sargon and Narâm-Sin, and other early Babylonian and Assyrian rulers. This chronicle contains part of the original composition from which the historical portions of the "Omens of Sargon and Narâm-Sin" were derived; it also furnishes a synchronism in early Babylonian and Assyrian history, which affects the arrangement of the chronology of both countries.

(2) A chronicle concerning early Babylonian and Assyrian rulers, which forms a continuation of that concerning Sargon and Narâm-Sin. It repeats the story of Ura-imitti and Bêl-ibni, which has survived, with certain differences of name, in the history of Agathias; and it supplies in the form of synchronisms some valuable material for settling the chronology of the earlier Babylonian dynasties. It proves that the so-called "Second Dynasty" never ruled at Babylon, but only in "the Country of the Sea" on the shores of the Persian Gulf; and it throws light on the causes which brought the powerful dynasty of Hammurabi to an end. The fall of this dynasty we may now trace to the exhausting wars carried on by its later kings, but more especially to the Hittite invasion in the reign of Samsu-ditana. The chronicle also records the Kassite conquest of southern Babylonia.

(3) Part of a Neo-Babylonian version of the "Omens of Sargon and Narâm-Sin," the historical sections of which agree more nearly with the new chronicle than with the Assyrian version of the "Omens."

(4) Part of a new Babylonian chronicle, containing a collection of extracts from a longer text. The portion of the chronicle which is preserved refers to events ranging from the eleventh to the seventh century B.C. In some respects it resembles the "Synchronous History" of Babylonia and Assyria.

(5) Part of a Babylonian religious chronicle and register of portents, which took place in the eleventh century B.C., and possibly include the record of a solar eclipse.

(6) A new Date-List of the kings of the First Dynasty of Babylon, which, though not strictly a chronicle, furnishes historical information in the date-formulae which it supplies.

Of four texts new editions are here given. Thus the small Date-List of the First Dynasty of Babylon, which is preserved in the Imperial Ottoman Museum at Constantinople, is here republished, since my copy of the tablet, made in the winter of 1902, differs in several particulars from the published editions of the text. A new edition of the Babylonian Dynastic Chronicle is also here included, which gives a number of new readings and replaces the two smaller fragments of the text in their correct positions. Finally, for comparison with the Chronicle of Sargon and Narâm-Sin, the Assyrian version of the "Omens" and the "Legend of Sargon" are here republished and translated.

In the Preface to the first volume of this work (Vol. II of the series) a short account is given of the chief problems which are raised or solved by the new texts, and further reference to them here is therefore needless. For a full discussion of the information supplied by the new chronicles the reader is referred to the introductory chapters printed in that volume, which deal, approximately in chronological order, with the events recorded in the texts. In the "Index to Registration-Numbers" at the end of the present volume references are given to the chapters in which the different chronicles and other compositions here published are discussed.

I.

A CHRONICLE CONCERNING SARGON AND NARÂM-SIN, KINGS OF AGADE, AND OTHER EARLY BABYLONIAN AND ASSYRIAN RULERS.

[No. 26472.]¹

 2. ša-ni-na u ma-ĥi-ri ul i-ši ša-lum-mat-su eli mâtâtî^{2l}

¹ The tablet is completely preserved with the exception of the bottom right-hand corner and two broken signs upon the reverse; it measures 2½ in. in breadth, and 3¾ in. in length. For a detailed comparison of the text of the obverse, and of the first section of the reverse, with the Omens of Sargon and Narâm-Sin, see Vol. I, chap. II. The sections referring to Dungi, and to Ura-imiti and Bêl-ibni, are discussed in Vol. I, chap. III.

² The phrase ina palî^{itu} Iš-tar is probably not to be taken as meaning "through Ishtar's insignia of royalty," but as "through the insignia of royalty bestowed by Ishtar."

 6. šal-lat-su-nu ina a-ma-a-ti³ u-še-bi-ra⁴

¹ For a discussion of this interesting variant to the text of the Omens, see Vol. I, chap. II.

² The "eleventh year" may probably be taken to mean the eleventh year of Sargon's reign. The reading of the Omens may be explained as implying that it took Sargon three years to complete his subjugation of the Country of the West.

⁴ The first six lines of the text correspond to the historical extract in the seventh section of the Omens (K. 2130, Obv., ll. 22-26).

OBV.

7.  7.  8.  9.

7. The sons of his palace for five kasbu (around) he settled,
 8. and over the hosts of the world he reigned supreme.¹
 9. Against Kašalla he marched, and he turned Kašalla into mounds and heaps of ruins ;
 10. he destroyed (the land and left not) enough for a bird to rest thereon.²

7. mârê^{pl} ekalli-šu a-na v kas-bu TA-A-AN u-še-šib-ma

 10. ina lib-bi-šu man-za-az iṣ-ṣur u-ḥal-lik²

¹ Ll. 7 and 8 correspond to the eighth section of the Omens (K. 2130, Obv., ll. 28 and 29). The sense of the two passages appears to be entirely different, but they may be reconciled on the supposition that each has retained details given in the original text which the other omits; see further, Vol. I, chap. II.

² Ll. 9 and 10 correspond to the ninth section of the Omens (K. 2130, Obv., ll. 31-34, and No. 67404, Obv., ll. 1-4). The phrase in l. 10 is elliptical; it implies that the destruction of the land was so complete that it included even so much of it as a bird might perch upon.

11. Afterwards in his old age¹ all the lands revolted against him,²

13. ka-mar-šu-nu iš-kun um-man-šu-nu rapaštîm(tîm) u-šam-ki-it³

¹ The Omens have entirely altered the sense of the following passage by reading ši-bu-ti in place of ina ši-bu-ti-šu and making it the subject of the verb ibbalkitû.

² The object of the verb is obviously Sargon, but it will be noticed that in the text the feminine form of the 3rd pers. sing. of the pronominal suffix is employed ; it may be taken as referring to šîbâtû. In the Omens the masculine form is given.

³ Ll. 11-13 correspond to the tenth section of the Omens (K. 2130, Obv., l. 36-Rev., l. 2, and No. 67404, Obv., ll. 5-11).

 u-šam-ki-it*

17. makkur-šu-nu a-na A-ga-de^{KI} u-še-ri-ba³

¹ The verb ik-mi-is-su is probably not the 3rd pers. plur. (ikmīsā), but the 3rd pers. sing. with the 3rd masc. sing. pronominal suffix (= ikmīs-šu). The subject of the verb is the land of Subartu.

² For dalāhu šu-a-tu the Omens read subāti^{pl}-šu-nu, a reading which does not suit the context so well, and was probably due to a copyist's mistake. The sign , if carelessly written with a space in the centre, might easily be misread as  .

³ Ll. 14-17 correspond to the eleventh section of the Omens (K. 2130,

OBV.

Rev., ll. 5-9, and No. 67404, Rev., ll. 1-7). Ll. 20-23 of the text are not represented by any section in the Omens. It is possible that some connection may be traced between the third section of the Omens (K. 2130, Obv., ll. 8-11) and ll. 18 and 19 of the text, for certain points of similarity between them suggest that they had a common origin; see further, Vol. I, chap. II.

¹ This phrase may possibly be taken to mean that he included both Agade and Babylon within the boundary of his kingdom. It is more probable, however, that we should regard it as implying that he increased the boundaries of Agade, making them as large as those of Babylon.

² For other examples of the omission of ša in a relative clause, see Delitzsch, Assyr. Gram., § 147 (2).

² Ll. 1-3 of the reverse correspond to the twelfth section of the Omens (K. 2130, Rev., ll. 11-14, and No. 67404, Rev., ll. 8-11).

⁴ This line of the text corresponds to the thirteenth section of the Omens (K. 2130, Rev., ll. 16-18, and No. 67404, Rev., ll. 12 ff.).

¹ The traces of the sign following 𐎶- are probably those of 𐎶𐎶; the reading 𐎶- 𐎶𐎶 𐎶 is the only other possible one.

² The phrases in the second half of the line are obscure, but they certainly describe the evil fate of Dungi at the hands of Marduk, whose wrath had been roused by his impious treatment of Esagila. In a Neo-Babylonian text < must be taken as the copula, and not phonetically as the first syllable of a word; it is possible that the text is corrupt and that the scribe carefully copied the signs as he found them on his original.

¹ This section of the text (ll. 8-13), which is repeated on No. 96152, Obv., ll. 1-7 (see below, p. 15 f.), gives the Babylonian form of the story of Beleous and Beletaras, which has hitherto been known only from the history of Agathias II, 25 (cf. ed. Dindorf, p. 222). For a discussion of the names and for a comparison of the Greek with the Babylonian version of the story, see Vol. I, chap. III.

² The suggested rendering of this phrase is conjectural. The ideogram is possibly a variant form of Brünnow, No. 3556, which has the meaning pihû, "to shut, to close," in which case it should be transliterated in the text as pihê(e).

² Sa-ra-pi-šu we may possibly connect with sirapu, sirpu, "shears," and render the phrase at the end of the line "he died by his own weapon"; it may also be an infinitive describing his action at the time of his death. The reading pap-pa-su is preferable to kur-pa-su (var. si), but its usual meaning does not suit the context. I owe to a suggestion of Prof. Zimmern the rendering of tibû in l. 12 with the meaning "to arise, to rise up" (cf. Jensen, Keilins. Bibl., VI, p. 306).

¹ For a full discussion of this catch-line and of the synchronism it supplies between early Assyrian and Babylonian history, see Vol. I, chap. V. In the blank space on the lower half of the reverse, below the catch-line, are inscribed the characters . The first of these signs is made up of the archaic form of , the ideogram for aniêlu, "man," written twice, the second time reversed; cf. Brünnow, No. 6422 (= ip-pi-ra) and Cun. Texts, XI, pl. 43, K. 15034, l. 5. (= ti-ši-e...). It may be noted that  ⇒ = bârû, "magician, soothsayer," but it is unlikely that ⇒ has this meaning in the phrase upon the tablet. It is more probable that the first of the signs consists of a device for distinguishing the series to which the document belonged; and, as ippêru had some such meaning as "overthrow, downfall" (cf. Delitzsch, Handwörterbuch, p. 116), we may perhaps trace in the composite ideogram a reference to the contents of the tablets which were concerned with the strife of early kings. Possibly the text of these chronicles had been handed down from a remote period; and while the archaic signs of the early tablets had been transformed in course of time to those current in the Neo-Babylonian period, the archaic form may have been retained in the case of the rare sign which gave the title of the work. On this supposition we may see in the second sign, ⇒, the numeral "two," indicating that the tablet was the second one of the series.

¹ The name of Ulam-Buriash occurs in the explanatory List of Kings, K. 4426 + R. 617, Obv., Col. I (see Cun. Inscr. West. Asia, Vol. V, pl. 44, l. 25 a and b), where the name is written as ^mU-lam-Bur-ia-a-aš, and explained as the equivalent in Babylonian of ^mLi-dan-bêl-mâtâtî. It occurs also under the form U-la-Bu-rari-ia-aš on a stone knob from Babylon, where this king terms himself "king of the Country of the Sea" (see Weissbach, Babylonische Miscellen, p. 7, pl. 1, no. 3). For a discussion of this section of the chronicle, see Vol. I, chap. IV.

² The scribe has written  for , omitting one of the wedges by mistake.

¹ For a discussion as to whether we may identify this ruler with Agum I or Agum II, see Vol. I, chap. IV.

² The sign  was employed as an ideogram for the names of Bêl and Ninib as well as of Ea (cf. Brünnow, Nos. 10036-10038). The close connection of the god Ea with the Country of the Sea renders the reading of his name in the present passage more probable than that of either of the other gods.

³ The phonetic value of the sign  (= milku, "counsel") is uncertain (cf. Cun. Txts., XII, pl. 34, Col. I, l. 13). For the group  (URU-NA = urnakku), cf. Brünnow, No. 6444. The meaning of the name of the temple must have signified something like "The temple of Counsel from the Shrine."

⁴ The text covers the whole of the reverse of the tablet. The line closing the last section is ruled at the bottom of the reverse, and is not followed by any catch-line, colophon, or title.

Arch.*, Vol. I, pp. 49 ff.; by Ménant, Babylone et la Chaldée, p. 100 f.; by Sayce, Records of the Past, New Ser., Vol. I, pp. 37 ff. A detailed comparison of the historical portions of Sections VII-XIII of the text with the chronicle No. 26472, Obv., l. 1-Rev., l. 4 (see above, pp. 3 ff.), is given in Vol. I, chap. II.

² The signs <<< 𐎶 certainly do not form part of the temporal clause, or protasis, of which the first half of each "omen" consists, since in the Neo-Babylonian version they are always placed in the right-hand column or compartment. The two signs, together with the king's name, thus clearly form the apodosis or principal clause. The omens were formerly regarded as lunar, and Prof. Sayce took <<< as Sin, "the moon," and 𐎶 as a verb, translating the whole phrase as "the moon was favourable for Sargon (or Narâm-Sin)." M. Boissier, however, is certainly right in holding that the omens were taken from the appearance of a victim's entrails; and, in support of this theory, he suggests that <<< (the second sign in the

¹ The tablet measures 3 in. in breadth and 1 $\frac{3}{8}$ in. in length. As in the Assyrian version (K. 2130), the separate sections are divided from one another by lines ruled horizontally across the tablet. On this Neo-Babylonian version the text is further divided by a line ruled down the centre of the tablet, which splits each section of the text into two compartments. In the left-hand of these compartments the augural portion of each section of the text is written, and they are thus separated from the historical statements which are arranged in the right-hand compartments. For a discussion of the relations this version of the Omens bears to the Assyrian version and to the chronicle No. 26472, see Vol. I, chap. II.

¹ The main portion of the tablet K. 8532, and the two smaller fragments, K. 8533 and K. 8534, which are sometimes cited together by the symbols "S" and "A," were first published by George Smith in Trans. Soc. Bibl. Arch., Vol. III (1874), pp. 371 ff. The two smaller fragments join the main portion of the tablet and were published in their correct positions by George Smith. They were afterwards republished by Abel and Winckler in the latter's Untersuchungen zur altorientalischen Geschichte (1889), p. 153, as unjoined fragments of the same tablet (cf. also Winckler's translation in Schrader's Keilins. Bibl., II, pp. 272 ff.). They were restored to their correct positions in 1895; see my paper on "The fragments of a Babylonian chronicle rejoined," in the Zeits. für Assy., XII, p. 395 f. For other references to the chronicle, cf. Bezold, Catalogue, p. 936. The small fragment K. 14839 (one of the previously unnumbered fragments of the Kuyunjik Collection) is probably part of a copy of a very similar chronicle. As there is no room for its text on p. 143 or 145 of this volume, it has been given as a small block in Vol. I, chap. VII.

¹ The three rulers, whose names are mentioned in this and the two following lines, belong to an early period of Babylonian history. They are separated from the kings of the First Dynasty of Babylon by the end of Col. II, the whole of Col. III, and the upper part of Col. I of the reverse, i.e. by about two columns of the dynastic list; a similar portion of the list (the end of Rev., Col. I, Rev., Col. II, and the beginning of Rev., Col. III, i.e., not more than two columns) was occupied by the nine groups, or dynasties, of the List of Kings, from the period of the First Dynasty of Babylon onwards.

² The lower part of Col. II and the whole of Col. III are wanting.

² According to my reading of l. 7, the length of this dynasty should not be twenty-three years but twenty years and three months. It is probable that the scribe has arrived at his total of twenty-three years by reckoning the three months in l. 5 as three years. This explanation is preferable to emending the "three" in l. 7 to "six," for even after making the alteration the total length of the reigns would be twenty-three years and three months, and there would still be an error in the summary in l. 8.

² It is probable that the name of this Elamite king may be restored as 𒍪, Ae-aplu-ušur, whose name occurs on the chronicle No. 27859, Obv., l. 16, as that of a Babylonian king who reigned between Eulbar-shakin-shum and Nabû-mukîn-apli. In support of this restoration we may note that the traces of the end of the name in the text are those of 𒍪, ušur, while in the List of Kings the beginning of the name is preserved as 𒍪, proving that the first component of the Elamite king's name was the name of a god; see further, p. 62, n. 2, and Vol. I, Chaps. VII and VIII.

³ Marduk-shapik-zêr-mâti is here credited with having formed an extensive and prosperous empire.

² The subject of the verb is clearly Sutû, which is employed in the collective sense for the whole nation.

² My interpretation of this line and of the seven lines which follow is that they enumerate the years in which the statue of Marduk was not brought out in the New Year's procession but remained ina parakki, "within the shrine." The phrase ina parakki is supposed to be repeated at the beginning of each of the six lines that follow; see further, Vol. I, chap. VIII.

The sequence in the text shows that he lived after Eulbar-shakin-shum and before Nabû-mukîn-apli; and the traces of the Elamite king's name in the List of Kings and in the chronicle K. 8532, etc. (see above, p. 55) support this conclusion. See further, Vol. I, chap. VIII.³ This line and the two that follow refer to years in the reign of Nabû-mukîn-apli.

The original section, of which this formed the first line, evidently recorded the defeat of Shamash-mudammik by Adad-nirari III, and was parallel to a portion of the "Synchronous History" (K. 4401 a, Rev., Col. I, ll. 1-7).

¹ This line also formed the first line in a section of the chronicle. It is probable that we should restore ina tarši, "in the time of," rather than ana tarši, "against," for Nabû-šum-ukîn reigned scarcely long enough for Tiglath-pileser to have undertaken extensive military operations against him. According to the List of Kings, he reigned one month and twelve days; the Babylonian Chronicle (84-2-11, 356, Col. I, l. 17) states that he reigned a little over two months and was then deposed by Ukîn-zêr.

² It is probable that we may restore the name as [Marduk-ap]lu-iddina, i. e., Merodach-baladan III. In that case the text gives us the beginning of the name of Merodach-baladan's father. For a discussion of this possibility and of the tradition of Merodach-baladan's parentage preserved in Is. xxxix, 1, and II Kgs., xx, 12, see Vol. I, chap. VIII.

² Marduk-zakir-shum only reigned for one month. Marduk-bêl-ushe[. .] may have been a pretender whom he defeated in the course of his short reign, or before he secured the throne himself.

³ It is strange that two sections should be devoted to Marduk-zakir-shum's reign. We may conjecture that Marduk-balâțsu-[. . .] was another pretender to the throne whom Marduk-zakir-shum succeeded in defeating before he himself was deposed by Merodach-baladan III. The name may probably be restored as Marduk-balâțsu-[ikbi].

¹ This interregnum clearly corresponds with the eight years' interregnum of the Babylonian Chronicle (84-2-II, 356, Rev., Col. I, l. 28), which in the List of Kings are assigned to Sennacherib. The figure "eight" has not been restored in the text, for it is possible that the reign of Erba-Sin (see ll. 8 ff.) fell within this period, in which case a smaller number of years than eight would probably have been assigned to the period by the writer.

² It is possible that the name should be read as Erba-ilishu, and that of his father as Ilishu-shakin-shum. No king of the name of Erba-Marduk (or Erba-ilishu) occurs at this period either in the List of Kings or in the Babylonian Chronicle. That the chronicler believed he was actually king in Babylon is proved by l. 9. The simplest reconciliation of this passage with the List of Kings and the Babylonian Chronicle is to assign Erba-Marduk's reign to the period of interregnum. Though he clearly conferred benefits on the people of Babylon and Borsippa, and was apparently recognized by the official priesthood, he may not have been universally recognized and his claims may have been disputed by other candidates. The sections of the Chronicle to which ll. 16 and 17 refer may have recounted the rise of one, or possibly two, aspirants to the throne. See further, Vol. I, chap. VIII.

¹ It is possible that the text is corrupt and that tab () has been written by mistake for nab () ; otherwise we must assume the existence of an Itatafal form of the verb. XIII, pl. 48) ; here also the scribe may have made a mistake, writing   for , which would give the regular Ifteal form al-ta-ap-rak-ka.

A NEW DATE-LIST OF THE KINGS OF THE FIRST DYNASTY OF BABYLON.

[No. 80,037 with restorations from S. 16 (I.O.M.), No. 92,702, and
No. 16,924.]¹

¹ The text of No. 80,037 is published below, pp. 181 ff. The tablet is a new duplicate of the "Chronicle of the Kings of the First Dynasty," which was edited and translated from two tablets in the British Museum (Nos. 92,702 and 16,924) in my Letters and Inscriptions of Hammurabi, Vol. III, pp. 212 ff.; this new duplicate, when complete, covered the period from the 1st year of Hammurabi to the 17th year of Ammi-zaduga, and the portion of it that is preserved enables us to restore several of the missing date-formulae. S. 16 is part of a small tablet from Abû Habba inscribed with the formulae for the opening years of the reigns of Hammurabi and Samsu-iluna, and it is preserved in the Imperial Ottoman Museum at Constantinople; it has been previously transliterated and translated by Lindl, Beiträge zur Assyriologie, Bd. IV, p. 342 f., and by Scheil, Délégation en Perse, Mémoires, t. II, p. 83. When staying in Constantinople in the autumn of 1902 I was enabled, through the kindness of Hamdi Bey, to make a copy of the original tablet (S. 16), and, as my copy differs in several points from the transliterations published by Lindl and Scheil, it is published on p. 193 of this volume. The new duplicate No. 80,037 is preserved in the British Museum, and measures 4 in. in height and 2½ in. in breadth. Its text is here transliterated and translated, with restorations and variant readings from S. 16 (cited as D) and Nos. 92,702 and 16,924 (cited as A and B respectively). The gaps which occur in the new text from the 26th year of Hammurabi to his 39th year, and from the 13th year of Samsu-iluna to the 30th year of Ammi-ditana may be partially filled in from Nos. 92,702 and 16,924; see my Letters of Hammurabi, III, pp. 234 ff., 244 ff. For a fuller description of the new duplicate No. 80,037 and a discussion of the additional information it supplies, see Vol. I, chap. VII.

1. The year of Hammurabi, the king.
2. The year in which righteousness¹ was established in the land.²
3. The year in which the throne of the exalted shrine of Nannar was made in Babylon.³
4. The year in which the wall of Malgia⁴ was built.
5. The year in which the [.] of the god⁵ was made.
6. The year in which the fortress of the goddess Laz (was built).⁶

¹ The scribe of D has written KI for DI by mistake.

² A gives the variant reading M[A]-D_LA].

³ So D; A gives the shorter formula [MU] GIŠ-GU-ZA (DINGIR)URU-[KI].

⁴ The scribe of D has written GA for MAL by mistake.

⁵ The traces on A may be possibly read, not as MU [.] DINGIR-RA [.], but as MU E[N] K[A]-AŠ-BAR-RA[.], "the year in which the lord, the maker of decisions [.]."

⁶ The traces of the syllable of the goddess's name upon A are probably those of LA. On D a fuller formula is given, the verb [MU]-UN-[NA-AN]-DIM being supplied.

 9. The year in which the Hammurabi-khegallu ³ Canal (was dug).
 10. The year in which the inhabitants and the cattle ⁴ of Malgia (were carried off).
 11. The year in which the cities of Rabiķu and Shalibi (were captured).⁵
 12. The year in which the throne of Şarpanitum (was made).

¹ A reads I-SI-IN[.], which may probably be restored as I-SI-IN-NA(KI). The traces of the sign preceding I-SI-IN on A are probably those of BAD. For a further discussion of the formula for this year, see Vol. I, chap. VII.

² A gives a variant formula for this year, reading MU MA-[D]A TIG (ID) Nu-ku-[uš-ni-šz], "the year in which the district on the banks of the Nukhush-nishi-Canal (was)."

³ The traces of the sign following bi on A are those of HE.

⁴ The traces of the third and fourth characters in the line preserved by A are also those of A-LAM (Br. No. 6635).

⁵ A gives the abbreviated form of the date for this year as MU k[a]-b[i]-ku(KI).

YEAR.

13. MU UMU¹ - KI LUGAL GUB² DU MAḤ - BI
 14. MU GIŠ-GU-ZA (DINGIR) NINNI KA-DINGIR-RA(KI)

 18. MU NIN⁵ - MAḤ (DINGIR) EN - LIL - RA
 19. MU BAD IGI - ḤAR - SAG - GA⁶
 20. MU GIŠ - GU - ZA (DINGIR) MER - RI

13. The year in which the king entered Umu-ki¹ and great abundance (was established).
 14. The year in which the throne of Ishtar of Babylon (was made).
 15. The year in which his (i.e., Hammurabi's) seven images (were made).³
 16. The year in which the throne of Nabû (was made).
 17. The year in which the images of Ishtar and Adad⁴
 18. The year in which the exalted lady⁵ of Bel (. . . .).
 19. The year in which the fortress of Igi-kharsagga (was built).⁶
 20. The year in which the throne of Adad (was made).

¹ The traces of this sign upon A are clearly those of UM, not AB, for the two upright wedges are written quite distinctly.

² A gives the variant [GU]B-BA.

³ A reads MU ALAM-B[1] VII (= IMIN)-NA.

⁴ A and B read GAK-KI; it is possible that the last sign in the line on C is also KI, not KU.

⁵ The traces of the sign suggest NIN rather than BARA.

⁶ B gives the variant reading [. . . .] EN-IGI-ḤAR-SAG-GA.

YEAR.

21. [MU] BAD (URU) Ba - [šu].¹
 22. [MU] ALAM Ha-am-mu-ra-bi LUGAL NIG-SI-DI²
 23. [MU] ZIMBIR (KI) - RA³
 24. [MU] (DINGIR) EN-LIL- RA
 25. [MU BAD Z]IMBIR(KI) - RA⁴

21. The year in which the wall of the city of Bašu (was . . .).¹
 22. The year in which the image of Hammurabi, the king of righteousness, (was made).²
 23. The year in which the [.] of the city of Sippar (was).³
 24. The year in which [.] for Bêl (was made).
 25. The year in which the wall of the city of Sippar (was built).⁴

¹ B reads Ba-šu(KI), A [B]a-zi(KI). The scribe of C has written LUM by mistake for ŒU. That the name is to be read as Bašu and not Balum is clear from the variant reading of A, and from tablets dated by this formula (see Letters of Hammurabi, Vol. III, p. 234, n. 56).

² A and B gave the abbreviated formula [MU ALAM] Ha-am-mu-ra-bi. It may be noted that on D the line extends to the edge of Col. II, so that the sign DI is written almost over the sign for the numeral x, which is inscribed opposite the 10th year of Samsu-iluna.

³ A and B omit RA. Between the 22nd and the 24th years there are two lines on B which read [.]NUN-KI and [. U]D-KIB-NUN-KI-RA. The most probable explanation is that the scribe of B has written the same formula twice by mistake, the second time adding the postposition RA; see Vol. I, chap. VII.

⁴ A and B omit RA; B reads [. Z]IMBIR(KI) BA-RU.

[The text of No. 80037 is wanting from the 26th year to the 39th year of Hammurabi's reign.]¹

¹ For the readings of A and B for these years, see my Letters of Hammurabi, III, pp. 234 ff.

² The reading of the determinative KI at the end of the line is taken from A.

³ The line is restored from A and from the date upon Bu. 91-5-9, 2369 (see Letters of Hammurabi, III, p. 241, n. 73).

2. The year in which the independence of Sumer [and Akkad was established].²
3. The year in which the canal named Samsu-iluna-nagab-nukhush-nishi was dug.³
4. The year in which the canal named Samsu-iluna-ḫegallu was dug.⁴

¹ The verb IN-GAR is restored at the end of the line from D; A gives the abbreviated formula [M]U *Sa-am-s*u-i-lu-na LUGAL-E.

² The verb was probably omitted by both A and B.

³ B reads MU (ID) Sa-am-su-i-lu-na-[na-ga-ab]-nu-uḫ-šī; the verb, which is restored from D, was probably omitted by C.

⁴ The verb is restored from D; it is omitted by B, and was probably omitted by C.

YEAR.

6. The year in which the image of the god [. (was made)].²
7. The year in which the mašrakhu (was made).³
8. The year in which the king entered Umu-ki, and mountain and river alike (gave abundance).⁴
9. The year in which the army of the Kassites (. . . .).⁵

¹ B gives the abbreviated formula MU GIŠ-GU-ZA BARA-GE, the fuller formula occurring upon D. The scribe of D has written the third line of the obverse round the edge of the tablet, and has afterwards rewritten the sign GAR at the end of l. 2; he has thus obliterated GUD, the sign at the end of the last line of the reverse.

² The line has been restored from D, with which the reading of C agrees. The traces on B suggest the variant reading MU ALAM UNU GI, but the last two signs are not certain.

³ The formula for the seventh year has been omitted by the scribe of D, probably by mistake.

⁵ For this year D gives the variant formula MU UŠ-SA UMU-KI LUGAL GUB, "The year after that in which the king entered Umu-ki."

III.—REIGN OF ABÊSHU'.

[The text of No. 80037 is wanting for the reign of Abêshu'.]³

¹ The formulae for the 10th, 11th, and 12th years are restored from A and B. In the formula for the 10th year the last five signs are clearly not to be taken as i-da-ma-ra-aš, i.e., "the year in which the army was smitten with sickness," for in no other instance in the formulae upon the date-lists does a Semitic verb occur. The only Semitic words that are found are proper names, the language in which the formulae are expressed being invariably Sumerian. The rebuilding of the walls of Ur and Erech, recorded in the formula for the 11th year, may have been due to their destruction by the Kassites two years before.

² For the readings of A and B for these years, see my Letters of Hammurabi, III, pp. 244 ff.

³ Traces of a few formulae, probably referring to the early years of the reign of Abêshu', are preserved on Col. III of B; see my Letters of Hammurabi, Vol. II, pl. 232, and Vol. III, p. 248 f.

IV.—REIGN OF AMMI-DITANA.

[The text of No. 80037 is wanting for the first thirty years of Ammi-ditana's reign.]¹

YEAR.

 34. MU ALAM NAM - UR - SAG - GE
*Sa-am-su-i-lu-na*⁵

31. The year in which the god Ninib²
 32. The year in which the wall of Ishkun-Marduk (was built).³
 33. The year after that in which the wall of Ishku(n-Marduk was built).⁴
 34. The year in which the image of the might of Samsu-iluna(. . . .).⁵

¹ For the formulae referring to the earlier years of Ammi-ditana's reign (preserved by B), see Letters of Hammurabi, III, pp. 248 ff.

² So the traces upon B are to be read.

³ The new text confirms my suggested restoration of the name of the city as Ishkun-Marduk (see Letters of Hammurabi, III, p. 250 f.).

⁴ The line is here restored from B, in which the formula occurs under this abbreviated form.

⁵ The formula for this year is written in a single line in B, which reads MU [ALAM NAM]-UR-SAG-GE Sa-am-su-i-lu-na. In C the formula takes up two lines of the tablet; the traces of characters at the beginning of the second line are very uncertain, but they may probably be read as the first four signs of Samsu-iluna's name.

YEAR.

35. MU Dûr - Am - mi - di - ta - na (KI)
 36. MU BIL EGIR Dûr - Am - mi - di ()¹
 37. MU BAD [. . .]² BAD KI - [.]
 XXXVII MU Am - mi - d[i] - t[a - n]a [LUGAL - E]

35. The year in which Dûr-Ammi-ditana (was built).
 36. The year after that in which Dûr-Ammi-di(tana was built).¹
 37. The year in which the wall [.]
 The thirty-seven years of Ammi-ditana, the king.

V.—REIGN OF AMMI-ZADUGA.

1. MU Am-mi-za-du-ga LU[GAL-E]
 (DINGIR) EN-LIL [.]³
 2. MU SIBA [.]

1. The year of Ammi-zaduga, the king, in which
 [.] the god Bêl [.]³
 2. The year in which the shepherd [.]

¹ The last sign in the formula upon B is probably DI, not KI; cf. the abbreviated formula for the thirty-third year.

² There are traces of only one sign between the two signs for BAD upon B; one sign only is wanting at the end of the line.

³ In C the formulae for the accession-years of the various kings appear to have been always given under their fuller forms, to judge from the two preserved in the reigns of Ammi-zaduga and Samsu-iluna (see above, p. 103). It is probable that Ammi-zaduga ascribed his accession to the direct intervention of Bêl, and duly commemorated the god's action in the formula for the year.

YEAR.

3. MU BIL EGIR SI[BA¹]
 4. MU [.]
 5. MU ALAM [.]²
 6. MU AŠ-[.]
 7. MU (DINGIR)³ [.]

[The text of No. 80037 is wanting for the remaining years of Ammi-zaduga's reign.]⁴

3. The year after that in which the shep[herd]
 4. The year in which [.]
 5. The year in which the image [.]²
 6. The year in which [.]
 7. The year in which the god³ [.]
 [.]⁴

¹ Slight traces of this sign are preserved.

² Many contracts are dated by the making of images of Ammi-zaduga under several different formulæ, some of which probably refer to different years of his reign.

³ The traces of this sign are not certain.

⁴ For remains of the formulæ for the ninth and tenth, or possibly of the eighth, ninth and tenth years of Ammi-zaduga's reign (preserved by B), see Letters of Hammurabi, III, p. 252 f. The formulæ from the eighth to the seventeenth years of Ammi-zaduga's reign were given by C in the lower part of Col. V and the upper part of Col. VI, which are now missing from the tablet. The new date-list (C) was thus compiled seven, or possibly eight, years later than the duplicate B, which was drawn up in the tenth year of Ammi-zaduga's reign (see Letters of Hammurabi, III, p. 253, n. 110). So far as it goes, therefore, the new tablet confirms the general accuracy of the smaller List of Kings, which assigns twenty-two years to Ammi-zaduga.

VI.—SUMMARY.

XLIII	MU	Ha - am - mu - ra - bi
XXXVIII	MU	Sa - am - su - i - lu - na
XXVIII ¹	MU	A - bi - e - šu - '
XXXVII	MU	Am - mi - di - tu - na
XVII ²	MU	Am - mi - za - du - ga
V	LUGAL - E - NE	MU - BI - NE CLXIII ³

The forty-three years of Hammurabi.

The thirty-eight years of Samsu-iluna.

The twenty-eight¹ years of Abêshu'.

The thirty-seven years of Ammi-ditana.

The seventeen² years of Ammi-zaduga.

Five kings, whose years (number) one hundred and sixty-three.³

¹ The reading of XXVIII by the new text (C) is quite certain ; see further, Vol. I, chap. VII.

² The tablet was evidently compiled in the seventeenth, or possibly the eighteenth, year of Ammi-zaduga's reign ; for a discussion of the length of his reign, see Vol. I, chap. VII.

³ The line following this summary upon the tablet appears to give the name of the scribe, though we should look for this more naturally in the colophon, traces of the first line of which may be seen at the end of the column. The signs may be read as Šu-lu-ni.īluŠamaš DUB-SAR-UKU, "Shuluni-Shamash, the royal scribe." The reading of the name is not quite certain, but Šu-lu-ni appears preferable to šU Ib-ni ; the employment of UKU for LUGAL may be explained as due to the sign having formed part of the actual title.
